GO IV

GO IV

A tough and exciting kids' game show in which two teams of four friends compete against each other in a series of adventurous challenges.

Each week, two teams of four children aged 9 to 14 face off in a suspenseful and adventurous competition. With the honor of the team at stake, the kids must cleverly combine tactics and skill with creativity and team spirit in order to win the trophy.

The first episode begins with the show's host meeting the teams. Who are these kids and do they have what it takes? Each team is dressed in a different color - red or yellow - and each chooses a team name, a yell and a team captain.

All week long the two teams play against each other. Every game is centered on a different theme such as tactics, team spirit, speed, strength, or knowledge. In the 7-minute episodes from Monday to Thursday, one member from each team competes in an individual challenge where they can win one point for their team.

Before the beginning of the challenge, the host gives a cryptic description of what lies ahead: "You'll need someone with a strong back", "someone who's not easily frightened", or "someone who likes speed". Then, the team discusses and decides who will play the game. After that, the real fun starts. Making a raft and racing across a lake, climbing a high pole, moving sand across an obstacle course or navigating a car through a maze while blind-folded - these are only some of the adventures the children have to face in this amazing game show.

On Friday, the teams join up to play the decisive game. The final round is worth three points and can significantly tip the scales for any one team. Individual strength or speed does not matter here; now the kids need to prove they can really work together as a team. On Saturday, the entire week's game is compiled in a 30-minute episode for the whole family to enjoy.
