Clockwise

Fast-paced and highly entertaining, “Clockwise” is a studio-based games show in which contestants attempt to beat the ultimate rival – the clock. Since every second is worth money, the contestants have to give as many answers as possible to the host’s questions. Those who survive the first five rounds will face one final question for all the cash accumulated in the account. “Clockwise” is produced by Kuperman Productions in association with Keshet Formats. The game show debuted on Israel’s leading Channel 2 in 2008.

The Wedding I Did (n't) Have

What if the most important day of your life turned out to be a complete disaster? The real-life series "The Wedding I Did (n't) Have" allows those who have messed up their first wedding a second chance. Whereas one spouse believes to be part of a documentary about weddings that went terribly wrong, the other is organizing a new wedding day, under one condition: The event must be kept entirely secret from their partners. Produced by Jokfoe for Belgian TV broadcaster VIJFtv, the show first aired on VIJFtv in early 2008, when it outperformed the channel's average share by up to 200 percent.

SevenOne International
